

G51FSE - Exam Questions from Specifications/Implementation Phase

1. UML can be used to model both requirements and specifications. Explain how the same tool is used differently for these things.
[4 marks]

2. Describe the difference between 'low-fidelity' or 'high-fidelity' prototyping.
[2 marks]

3. Companies often use coding conventions and standards. Describe two reasons why coding conventions help maintain implementation quality.
[2 marks]

4. Paired programming is an implementation approach designed to increase quality of software. Describe 3 benefits provided by paired programming.
[3 marks]